CURRENT TOPICS.

IT WILL BE OBSERVED, from the statement we print elsewhere, that the meeting of the Incorporated Law Society at Cambridge is not likely to suffer for want of topics for discussion. There are a dozen papers to be read, many of them on subjects of much present interest, the reception committee have provided an unusually attractive programme. With a dinner on Tuesday, a meet on Wednesday, and the choice of a cathedral or Newmarket Races on Thursday, no one will be able to say that his tastes have not been consulted.

NOWITHSTANDING increased strictness in the enforcement of the rule that the Vacation Judge will hear such applications only during the long vacation as may require to be immediately and promptly heard, the vacation court business increases. About 300 matters were disposed of during the first eight vacation sittings of the present year, as against about 216 disposed of during the same period last year. On most days this year the Vacation Judge has sat until after six o'clock in order to dispose of the matters in his paper.

THE ANNUAL PARLIAMENTARY RETURN, just issued, of receipts and payments in the several Divisions of the High Court of Justice, shows the cost of the administration of justice in the different branches of the High Court. The Chancery Division has always been supposed to afford a large surplus of profit, but on the face of this return an apparent loss is shown. The total receipts for fees, stamps, percentages, and brokerage during the year ending the 31st of March, 1879, was £243,524 10s. 7d. The total expenditure is set down at £305,579 12s. 7d. showing an apparent deficit of £62,055 2s. But in this total expenditure there are to be found such items as retiring annuities of judges (including pensions of our late Lord Chancellor, £5,000 per annum each) £0,085 11s. 4d." and "total payments for compensations, pensions, retiring annuities, and superannuation allowances of officers, £34,722 0s. 7d." There is also another item " salaries of judges (including salary of Lord Chancellor, £6,000 per annum) £63,000." Now, as the salaries of the judges of the Chancery Division, including £6,000 for the Lord Chancellor, only amount to £32,000, we presume that the unexplained £31,000 represents the salaries of the ordinary judges of the Court of Appeal, which amount to exactly that sum. Deducting from the apparent deficit of £62,055 2s. the two before-mentioned sums for chancellors' annuities, compensations, &c., and a proportionate part—say one-half—of the salaries of the judges of the appeal court, a balance of profit is shown. The Queen's Bench Division shows a profit; the amount of fees received being £36,263 3s. 4d., and the payments (including £4,792 5s. 10d. for "compensations and superannuation allowances," being £29,315 9s. 10d.; but in the two other Divisions the balance is the other way. In the Common Pleas Division the fees received amounted to £25,878 6s. 4d., and the payments (including £1,925 19s. 6d. for compensations, &c.), were £27,313 15s. 3d.; and in the Exchequer Division the fees amounted to £27,355 9s., and the payments to £31,352 6s. 7d. (including £5,651 14s. 3d., for compensations, &c.). In the Probate and Divorce Division the fees received were £150,727 8s. 1d., and the total expenditure (including £61,115 14s. 1d. for compensations, &c.) was £166,296 16s. 7d. In the Admiralty Court there was a serious loss. The fees received in the registry amounted to £8,100 17s. 10d., and the total expenditure (including £402 4s. 9d. for compensations, &c.), amounted to £13,613 18s. 6d. In all the Divisions of the High Court there was in the year covered by the return an increase of receipts amounting to £57,180 9s. 6d., of which amount £44,110 15s. 10d. was in the Chancery Division alone. The total receipts of all the Divisions of the High Court amounted to £491,849 13s. 2d., and the total expenditure to £590,346 1s. 1d., showing a deficit of £98,496 7s. 11d., against which sum there is to be set off £129,750 5s. 4d., charged in the expenditure for compensations and superannuations. We may add that in the highly lucrative office of Land Registry the receipts were £883 4s., being a decrease of £74 3s.; and the expenditure was £6,039 13s. 8d.

THE PRACTICE of passing temporary Acts is of very long standing. For instance, both the Statute of Frauds (which was made perpetual by 1 Jac. 2, c. 17, s. 5), and the Statute of Distributions (which was originally a seven years' Act, and after being twice continued, was made perpetual by the same Act of 1 Jac. 2, c. 17, s. 5), were temporary statutes, and in 1808 it was enacted by 48 Geo. 3, c. 106, that "when bills for continuing expiring Acts shall not pass before the Acts expire, such Acts shall be continued from their expiration, except as to penalties." It was not until 1863, however, that an "Expiring Laws Continuance Act" (26 & 27 Vict. c. 57), grouped the expiring Acts in one continuing statute and schedule. Moreover, up to 1875, the continuation was, generally speaking, up to a day fixed, and up to the end of the then next session of Parliament. The Expiring Laws Continuance statute for the present year, like its immediate predecessors, continues the expiring Acts up to the end of the next year, i.e., till the 31st December, 1880. The schedule contains twenty-two Acts, many of them familiar friends, such as 3 & 4 Vict. c. 89, which grants to stock-in-trade an exemption from poor rates, and 34 & 35 Vict. c. 87, which prohibits prosecutions for Sunday trading, except with the consent of the Attorney-General. Less known, perhaps, is the Militia Ballot Suspension Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 46), the omission of which would render all male persons of a certain age liable to serve in the militia or provide substitutes. The Petroleum Act of 1871 has disappeared from the schedule, that Act having been at last made perpetual.

by the Petroleum Act of 1879. The Railway Commissioners (the Act regulating whom appeared in the schedule last year) are continued by a separate Act of their own, called the Regulation Act, 1873 and 1874, Continuance Act, 1879, until December, 1882. Similarly, the Endowed Schools Acts are continued until December, 1882, and the Corrupt Practices Act until December, 1880, by separate statutes of the present session. Next year a very important "expiring" statute will have to deal with—we mean the Ballot Act, 1872, which, by section 33, is expressed to "continue in force till the 31st of December, 1880, and no longer, unless Parliament shall otherwise determine."

THERE IS A CURIOUS little Act of last session, remitting debts due in respect of loans made by the Exchequer Loan Commissioners and the Public Works Loan Commissioners, and setting forth in the schedule, with much fulness of detail, the reasons for each of the remissions. Among the objects for which the loans were originally made we find several churches, two or three roads, and a loan of £1,500 "advanced in 1818 to W. Pittock, of Deal, to assist him in catching and curing herrings." Mr. Pittock, appears to have found the herrings intractable, notwithstanding the assistance of the commissioners; for, we regret to observe it is stated that "after re-payment of some instalments he became bankrupt, and a portion only of the balance was recovered."

SOME INDICATION of the condition of the mercantile classes is afforded by the return of the receipts and expenditure of the Court of Bankruptcy. For the year ending the 31st of March, 1879, the total receipts were £136,755 3s. 11d., being an increase of £16,902 19s. 8d. upon those of the previous year.

It is stated that the Bar of England propose to entertain Brigadier-General Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., K.C.B., at dinner in the Hall of the Middle Temple, in which hall he kept his terms and was called to the bar.

The Autumn Circuit Court for the three south-western counties of Scotland was held on Tuesday week. There were no cases from any of the counties. Provost Shortridge presented a pair of white gloves to Lord Craighill, who expressed his gratification at the absence of crime in the district, and in the country generally. At his first circuit in Dumfries, three years ago, he had a similar presentation.

At an inquest at Hereford on Saturday on the body of a married woman, the jury deliberated, and after a short time asked to be allowed to retire. They were then taken in charge by the sergeant-at-mace and locked up. After half-an-hour's deliberation, a jurymen came out with a verdict, which the coroner would not accept. The Jurymen: Do I understand that we are to stop here all night without meat, drink, or fire?—The Coroner: Yes.—The Jurymen: Then, I think we are agreed. Another half-hour passed, and then a jurymen said there were eleven for a verdict and one against.—The Coroner said they must carry the other man with them. At 9.40 p.m. the Foreman said the dissenting jurymen would not give in—not if he stopped there a month. The Coroner then called the jury in and pointed out the features in the evidence again. The eleven were now getting angry with the dissentient (Mr. Hart).—A Jurymen: What do you think of it now, Mr. Hart?—Mr. Hart: I am of the same opinion as before.—The Coroner: If there is no chance of your agreeing I must bind you over to appear at the assizes.—A Jurymen: We have decided by a majority before in this room.—Another: It has been done by "tossing." Mutual recriminations then took place, and the dissentient told the others, "There are eleven dogs and one bone." At 10.15 p.m. a compromise was effected, the eleven giving in to the one, and passing a verdict that deceased came to her death by spinal apoplexy, brought on by excitement; but the eleven added a rider to the verdict that the cause of death was the husband.

THE SUMMARY JURISDICTION ACT, 1879.

I.

THIS important statute comes into operation on the 1st of January next, and a clear understanding of it will soon be absolutely necessary to every person engaged in the administration of the criminal law of England. We have already briefly noticed the Act, but we propose now to go through the various provisions seriatim. We would first, however, say a few words as to the general scope of the statute.

In respect of consolidation not very much is effected. The Small Penalties Act of 1865 and the Acts 10 & 11 Vict. c. 82, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 37, relating to the summary jurisdiction over juvenile offenders and petty larcenies are repealed and re-enacted; but, with the exception of one short sentence, the whole of Jervis' Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43), the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, and the whole of the Act 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, as to statement of cases for the High Court, are retained. We observe that this omission to consolidate has already caused some dissatisfaction to the members of the Trade Union Congress, and we think that it is to be regretted. Probably the extremely frequent incorporation of the Act of 1848 into general statutes caused the difficulty, and as the Act has been presented to Parliament in different shapes in three successive sessions it is almost too late to complain.

With regard to amendments of procedure and substance, we observe that Mr. Saunders, in his valuable edition of the statute, enumerates no less than twenty "new and useful provisions." The more important amendments in substance are:—(1) The extension of the power of justices to mitigate punishments; (2) the conferring of power to allow time for the payment of fines, and to allow fines to be paid by instalments; (3) the extension of summary jurisdiction in the case of juvenile offenders and trivial offences; (4) the establishment of a general right of appeal. The more important amendments of procedure are:—(1) The establishment of a general procedure on appeal to be applicable to all future statutes as of course, and to all past statutes at the option of the appellant; and (2) the regulation of warrants of distress. It will readily be believed that these and other reforms—which have been compressed into fifty-five sections of moderate length—have been accomplished by language which it requires the utmost care to understand properly, with reference to the general statutes and the numberless particular statutes with which it has to be read.

But let us now turn to the detailed consideration of the Act, and we think that the best way of doing so is to deal with the sections in their order, taking the amendments of substance first and the amendments of procedure afterwards.

The 4th section, which deals with mitigation of punishment, is a very general one. It enacts that where the court "has authority under this Act, or under any other Act, whether past or future," to impose imprisonment or a fine, the court may impose the imprisonment without hard labour "and reduce the prescribed period thereof, or do either of such acts" and in the case of a fine, "if it be imposed as in respect of a first offence," may reduce the prescribed amount thereof. The Act 27 & 28 Vict. c. 110, which prohibited justices from mitigating certain minimum penalties, is repealed, and the minimum fine in respect of a first offence becomes a thing of the past. There is a saving (Sect. 52), for penalties "under any Act relating to her Majesty's regular or auxiliary forces"—for the benefit, we presume inter alios, of those keepers of victualling houses who should happen to refuse to receive soldiers billeted upon them: see Army Discipline, &c., Act, 1879, s. 10. But the Act, by section 53, applies (as Jervis' Act did not) to proceedings under the Revenue Acts, under which it has been usual (see, for instance, 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 55, s.

78) to provide that penalties may not be mitigated to less than one-fourth. An instance of the minimum penalty for the second offence may be found in the Licensing Act, 1874, s. 12, repealing the 67th section of the Licensing Act, 1872, and providing also that in no case "shall the penalty, whether of excise or police, be reduced in any case to less than the minimum authorized by any other Act," a provision now impliedly repealed. Inasmuch as the imposition of lesser penalty than the minimum required makes an entire conviction invalid (see Whitehead v. Regina, L. R. 7 Q. B. 582), this reform, apart from any other reasons, is a very proper and useful one. It only remains to observe, on this part of the subject, that power is also given to impose a fine in lieu of imprisonment, where the imposition of imprisonment is compulsory, as in the case of the Vagrancy Act (5 Geo. 4, c. 83).

The 5th section is merely a re-enactment, with variations, of the Small Penalties Act, 1865, whereby the period of imprisonment in default of distress is limited according to a scale varying with the amount of fine ordered to be paid, the new scale being more favourable to the prisoner, and fixing a maximum term of imprisonment of three months.

The 6th section enacts that a sum recoverable before a court of summary jurisdiction, on complaint and not on information, is to be deemed to be a civil debt, and if recovered before the court itself shall be recovered in the manner pointed out by section 35. Turning to this section, we find that it abolishes the issue of warrants for non-appearance in the case of proceedings to recover such civil debts, and also abolishes imprisonment in case of non-payment, unless it be proved that the person making default "either has, or has had since the date of the order" for the payment of the money, "the means to pay"; and, further, that even in that case the court is to have the power of imprisonment given to a county court under the Debtors Act, 1869, and no greater power. The broad distinction drawn here between a complaint and information—which terms are in Jervis' Act, except the 1st section, used indiscriminately ("information or complaint")—may give rise to some little trouble; but we should imagine that wherever a particular statute uses the word "offence," the proceeding in respect of it is an information, and that the word "complaint" is restricted to proceedings of a quasi-civil character, as those under the Bastardy Acts.

The 7th section is a very useful one. It provides that the court, when ordering a sum of money to be paid, "may do all or any of the following things"—allow time, direct payment by instalments, and direct that the person liable to pay may give to the satisfaction of the court, "or of such other court of summary jurisdiction or such person as may be specified by that court," security in the manner provided by section 23—that is, by deposit of money, or by acknowledgment that the sum is due. We have no doubt that in very many cases justices have abstained from imposing penalties adequate to the offences proved—as, for instance, in cases of selling watered milk—from a desire to keep the offender out of prison. Now such leniency will no longer be necessary, and the recurrence of the periodical payment will keep the offender well in mind of his offence. The provision that the security may be to the satisfaction of some other court seems a little cumbersome, and we should hope that it will not be resorted to except in very peculiar cases.

Passing over the 8th section, which dispenses with an order for costs in case of five-shilling fines, we come to the "enforcing of recognizances" elaborately provided for by section 10. The opening paragraph seems somewhat obscure. It runs thus:—

Where a recognizance is conditioned for the appearance of a person before a court of summary jurisdiction, or for his doing some other matter or thing to be done in, to, or before a court of summary jurisdiction, or in a proceeding in a court of summary jurisdiction, such court, if the said recognizance appears to the court to be forfeited, may declare the recognizance to be forfeited, and enforce the payment of the sum due under such recognizance in the same manner as if the sum were a fine adjudged by such court to be paid which the statute provides no means of enforcing, and were ascertained by a conviction.

The paragraph goes on to provide, perhaps with an excess of leniency, that the forfeiture may, "at any time before the sale of goods under a warrant of distress," be mitigated or cancelled upon the person liable giving further security.

The next section, which provides for "summary trial of children for indictable offences," opens quite a new subject, which we propose to deal with in a future article.

Legislation of the Year.

ARMY DISCIPLINE AND REGULATION.

CAP. 33.—AN ACT TO AMEND THE LAW RELATING TO THE DISCIPLINE AND REGULATION OF THE ARMY.

This Act, which contains 181 sections and five schedules, is prefaced by an elaborate index showing the "arrangement of sections, with references to the corresponding provisions of the Mutiny Acts, Articles of War, and Enlistment Acts." We cannot find any repeal of the Enlistment Acts (30 & 31 Vict. c. 34, and 33 & 34 Vict. c. 67), nor of the Regimental Debts Act, 1863, nor of the Regulation of the Forces Act, 1871, so that the Act is not a perfect military code, although it is of course an enormous improvement upon the state of things, even if the mere diminution in the bulk of future statute books is taken into account.

It would be impossible, in our limited space, to give anything like a résumé of that portion of the statute which deals with the internal regulation of the army by the military authorities, but it is well to direct attention to some of the numerous duties which the Act throws upon the justices of the peace. These differ little, if at all, from those under the annual Mutiny Acts, but now that they are thrown into a permanent shape, those, at any rate, which affect the civil population may be expected to give rise to controversy. The whole of Part 3, for instance, which refers to "billetting and impressment of carriages," may be studied with advantage by the practitioner. Here we learn (section 100) of the duties of constables to provide billets; of the liability of the occupier of every inn and victualling house to comply with the requisition, under a penalty (section 107); of the power of a justice of the peace to grant redress to persons feeling aggrieved by having an undue proportion of soldiers billeted upon them, and of the annual list of keepers of victualling houses liable to billets by the "police authority," and of the power (section 110) of quarter sessions to increase the rates fixed by the fourth schedule to the Act to be paid for the carriages impressed—rates which may with advantage be compared with those fixed for conveyance by rail under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85, s. 12. Other portions of the Act which should be noticed are those (section 92) which enable a master to claim an apprentice who has enlisted, by applying to justices of the peace, if the apprentice be under twenty-one; the licensing of canteens under section 167, the exemption of soldiers from civil process by section 138, and the liability of the soldier to maintain his wife and children, "to the same extent as if he were not a soldier," under section 139.

It remains to notice that the Act is not to come into force "except in pursuance of an annual Act of Parliament to be hereafter passed" (see section 3), and that it remains in force until the 30th of April, 1880, by virtue of a separate statute passed the same day and called the "Army Discipline and Regulation (Commencement) Act, 1879." This latter statute, and not the Army Discipline Act itself, contains the well-known preamble of the annual Mutiny Acts that a standing army, "unless it be with consent of Parliament, is against law." It also contains a schedule of maximum charges for billeting, framed upon section 66 of the Mutiny Act, under which, however, the charges were fixed. It is not, however, stated by whom the actual charges are to be fixed, and it might be argued that the words "maximum price," in the second column of the schedule, ought to be rejected as insensible.

CHILDREN'S DANGEROUS PERFORMANCES.

CAP. 34.—AN ACT TO REGULATE THE EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN IN PLACES OF PUBLIC AMUSEMENT IN CERTAIN CASES.

This Act will, we think, be considered sufficiently stringent by the public. It provides that "any person who shall cause any child under the age of fourteen years to take part in any public exhibition or performance, whereby, in the opinion of a court of summary jurisdiction, the life or limbs of such child shall be endangered," shall, "for each offence," be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds. It will be observed that the court has absolute jurisdiction to decide whether the performance be dangerous or not, and the words "any public exhibition," &c., are of course wide enough to include everything which the framers of the Act intended. The exhibition, however, to come within the Act, must be "public," and there is nothing to prevent young children being trained in private in anticipation of their arriving at the age when they may legally display their prowess to the world. The Act further provides that the parent or guardian of the child, if aiding or abetting, shall be liable to the penalty also; and the employer of a child to whom actual bodily harm is caused "shall be liable to be indicted as having committed an assault," while "the court before whom such employer is convicted on indictment shall have power of awarding compensation not exceeding twenty pounds, to be paid by such employer to the child." The burden of proof that the child is above fourteen is to lie on the employer. There is no power of appeal given by the Act to the employer against the sentence of the court of summary jurisdiction, and hereto the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, will not come to his aid; for although section 19 of that Act, which gives a general right of appeal, applies to past as well as future Acts, it only applies to a sentence of imprisonment without the option of a fine, and the "Children's Dangerous Performance Act, 1879," confers upon justices the power to fine only.

PUBLIC WORKS LOANS.

CAP. 77.—AN ACT TO AMEND THE ACTS RELATING TO THE PUBLIC WORKS LOAN COMMISSIONERS, &c.

The principal provision of this Act is contained in the 2nd section, which fixes a minimum rate of interest for loans by the direction that where the rate is at present less than five per cent. it is to have added to it "such other rate as may be necessary in the judgment of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, in order to enable the loans to be made without loss to the Exchequer." The Public Works Loans Act, 1875, it will be remembered, provided that "every loan shall bear interest at a rate not less than the rate authorized by a special Act relating to such loan; or if no rate be authorized, not less than five per cent.," and it appeared, when the present statute was passing through Parliament, that the rate of interest stipulated had been rather too lenient of late years. The Act also (section 3) limits the amount to be advanced to any one borrower to one hundred thousand pounds, and (section 6) adds, "companies established for the purpose of constructing improved dwellings for the labouring classes" to the list of authorized recipients of loans. Upon reference to the schedule of the Act of 1875, we find the existing "works for the purposes of which the commissioners may lend money" are baths, burial grounds, river conservancy, docks, harbours, town improvement, labourers' dwellings, lighthouses, lunatic asylums, police-stations, prisons, libraries, school-houses, waterworks, workhouses, and "any work for which a sanitary authority are authorized to borrow under the Public Health Act, 1875."

General Correspondence.

EVIDENCE OF PREVIOUS CONVICTION.

[To the Editor of the Solicitors' Journal.]

Sir,—You lately drew attention (p. 849) to the Summary Jurisdiction Act of last session. I wish now specially to bring under your notice section 22, paragraph (2), relating to evidence of matters entered in the register there referred to, and particularly to the last clause of the paragraph. Having this before you, I would point to the recent case of the London School Board v. Harvey (27 W. R. 783, also L. R. 4 Q. B. D. 451, but not so fully reported), where it was held that, in a proceeding for a second non-compliance with a magistrate's order for school attendance, the first conviction could be proved without production of a copy of the conviction signed by the clerk of the peace or other officer of the quarter sessions; the production of the minute-book of the court being held sufficient. The case appears to be in conflict with Giles v. Siney (3 W. R. 92; not quoted apparently in the above case), decided on the Vagrant Act. It is deserving of notice that in the earlier case no counsel appeared to support the affirmative of the minute-book being sufficient evidence, and, in the later, none appeared to support the contrary view, and that Cockburn, C.J., was a member of the court in each case. There is, it is true, an enactment (section 17) in the Vagrant Act similar to the enactments of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 14, and 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18, referred to in the recent case; but whether these provisions be contained in the Act under which the proceeding is had, or in Acts of general application, can surely make no difference.

Now, having called your attention to these two cases, it must be a matter of some interest to know what is the effect of the enactment of the Summary Jurisdiction Act above noticed; I confess myself at fault here.

A. J. W.

A telegram from Leipsic states that the Imperial Tribunal of Justice, which has been instituted there, was solemnly opened on Wednesday. Dr. Friedberg, Secretary of State at the Law Office of the Empire in Berlin, was present, and delivered an address, in which he described the day's ceremony as the crowning of the edifice of the great work of judicial reform, and paid a tribute of gratitude to the Superior Tribunal of Commerce for its efforts in bringing about this result. He expressed a hope that the Imperial Tribunal would prove to be the strong rock of German law. Dr. Friedberg then swore in the president, Dr. Simson, and the Chief Imperial Prosecutor, Dr. Seckendorff, after which Dr. Simson tendered the oaths of office to the councillors of the court. Dr. Simson subsequently made a speech, in which he spoke of the unity of law as forming, side by side with the systems of a united army, foreign policy, and trade, the fourth pillar in the edifice of German unity. He said the Imperial Tribunal in Leipsic would aim at strictly guarding the rights of the people, and preserving the unity of the Fatherland from any chance of being broken up. The Imperial Advocates were then sworn in by the Chief Prosecutor, who also delivered an address, to which Judicial Councillor Dom replied on the part of the advocates. Dr. Simson closed the proceedings by a call for cheers for the Emperor, to which a most enthusiastic response was made.

Revising Barristers' Decisions.

City of London (Mr. C. J. Williamson).

Sept. 24.—AMENDMENT OF INCORRECT ADDRESS.—The REVISING BARRISTER said he had considered the objections raised by the Conservatives in a large number of cases to the abode of the voter, and with respect to which he was asked to state a case for a higher court. The question whether the revising barrister could touch the address had been already argued before the Court of Common Pleas and decided under the old Act; but under the present Act, if an address were incorrect, he had the power to amend it, provided the proper address could be supplied. The Act made it very clear that in the absence of the proper address, whether the voter was objected to or not, he ought to expunge the name, but to prevent surprise he could not do that without notice. By means of the objections raised due notice had been given to the voters, and he thought Mr. Hughes was perfectly justified in the course he had taken, because the addresses on the lists in many instances were insufficient to enable him to find the voters, who were therefore bound to give their correct addresses.

Sept. 24.—INSERTION OF QUALIFICATION FOR SUCCESSIVE OCCUPATION, NOT CLAIMED FOR.—Mr. Hughes pointed out that many objections had been taken because the parties had not resided within the limits for the requisite period, and had not claimed for successive occupation. It frequently happened that those gentlemen only came from another part of the city and had really a good qualification if the two addresses were given. The section of the Act bearing on the point was as follows: "Where the names stated in the list or claim, or proved to the revising barrister in relation to any alleged right to be on any list, is in the judgment of the revising barrister insufficient in law to constitute a qualification of the nature or description stated or claimed, but sufficient in law to constitute a qualification of some other nature or description, the revising barrister, if the name is entered in a list for which such true qualification in law is appropriate, shall correct such entry by inserting such qualification accordingly; and in any other case shall insert the name with such qualification in the appropriate list, and shall expunge it from the other list, if any, in which it is entered." He wished to ask if the court, under these new powers, would feel justified in inserting the second address in the fourth column, because, if not, it would be useless to ask the gentlemen concerned to come up. He thought the court had the power referred to; at any rate, the section might be read in that way.

The REVISING BARRISTER said he could not introduce a new qualification; all he could do was to see that the qualification was sufficiently identified. If he were to put in an additional address he should be importing a new element in the qualification, which he had no power to do. The whole thing depended upon the questions of law and fact—he could alter in the one case and not in the other. In other words, he could not supply a new qualification, which he should be doing if he adopted the suggestion of Mr. Hughes.

Sept. 26.—CLAIMING IN ONE PARISH WHILE QUALIFICATION WAS IN ANOTHER PARISH—TRANSFER OF NAME.—A voter had claimed for one parish while his qualification was in an adjoining parish.

Mr. Hughes suggested that the name should be transferred to the proper list, both parishes being in the same polling district. He contended that the court had power under the new Act to make the transfer.

The REVISING BARRISTER pointed out that there had been no publication of the claim as required by the statute.

Mr. Hughes asked what was the object of the Act if it did not meet a case of this kind.

The REVISING BARRISTER replied that if the Act met a case of this kind what was the use of publication at all. It seemed to him that Mr. Hughes argued that it was a matter of indifference whether the claim was published in the right parish or not.

Mr. Hughes said that the court had power to amend any claim in the way proposed.

The REVISING BARRISTER admitted that that was so if the proper form had been gone through; but in this case there had been an omission to publish the claim at the proper place—an omission which he could not overlook when asked to transfer the name to another list.

Mr. Hughes argued that the meaning of the Act was this: if a claimant established his right to vote, the revising barrister was bound to place his name upon the list.

The REVISING BARRISTER said that was assuming there had been a proper publication of the claim, but in this instance there had not been, and an intending objector might be misled. He disallowed the claim.

Sept. 26.—OCCUPATION AS TENANT.—The name of Mr. J. Marchant, 116, Lower Thames-street, was objected to on the ground that he was not a tenant in the sense required by the Act. The claimant said he and Mr. Pickford occupied the shop between them, and he paid that gentleman a rental for the user of 15s. per week. There was no division in the shop.

Mr. Smith said Mr. Pickford could shut the door upon the claimant at any time because it was really his shop. The claimant had merely a permissive occupation, and not that kind of independent occupation contemplated by the Act, which expressly stated "separately occupied for the purpose of any trade." Mr. Marchant was not a partner, and had no part of the premises assigned to him.

The claimant said he formerly occupied the whole shop, though he was now only Mr. Pickford's tenant.

The overseer having pointed out that Mr. Seemen was rated for the entire building,

The REVISING BARRISTER said that settled the question. Mr. Marchant evidently did not occupy as tenant, but only had an easement. The name must be struck out.

Rothbury (Mr. Trevelyan).

Sept. 27.—PROOF OF SERVICE OF OBJECTIONS.—Notices of objection had been forwarded through the post-office in an envelope.

Mr. Forster (Liberal agent) contended that the statute had been complied with by his having posted them in duplicate.

Mr. Brummell (Conservative agent) argued that the envelope was no part of the notice.

Mr. Forster then put in the stamped duplicates as proof of service, and submitted that that was sufficient.

Mr. Brummell produced the notices of the objections themselves, but without the envelope in which they had been received, maintaining that these did not correspond with the duplicates of his friend.

Mr. Forster claimed that the very production of these notices was sufficient proof of the service of the objections.

The REVISING BARRISTER having expressed his opinion that the posting of the objection had been proved, but not their delivery,

It was proved by the Conservative agent that in three cases there was no direct postal delivery at the houses of the persons objected to.

The REVISING BARRISTER held that in these cases the Liberal agent had failed to prove service within the legal time, and the objections were quashed. A case was asked for and granted.

Liverpool (Mr. Collins).

Sept. 29.—OCCUPIER'S NAME NOT IN RATE-BOOK.—Persons occupying one room of a house claimed to be placed upon the parliamentary and municipal register, though not themselves rated for the hereditament.

The REVISING BARRISTER said that the question arose for the first time since the Act of last year came into operation. Both he and Mr. McConnel, the other revising barrister, had considered the cases very carefully, and were of opinion that the applicants were entitled to be put upon the register. By section 19 of the Poor Rate Assessment Act, 1869, as now interpreted by section 14 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, overseers were bound to enter in the rate-book the name of the occupier of every rateable hereditament, whether the rate was collected from the owner or the occupier, and every such occupier should be deemed duly rated for any qualification or franchise depending upon the payment of the poor rates. This section was of general application, and it followed therefore that if part of a house was a rateable hereditament the occupation of which for the requisite period was capable of conferring the franchise, the fact that the occupier had not been rated in respect of it would work no disqualification.

Marylebone (Mr. A. BATHURST).

Sept. 27.—INCORRECT DESCRIPTION OF FLOOR ON WHICH ROOMS SITUATE.—In several cases the claimants had not correctly described the floor upon which their rooms were situated.

The REVISING BARRISTER allowed the claims, and said there was no law requiring a person to define the floor upon which he lived in a particular way. What some called the first floor others would call the second floor. He hoped the law on the point would either be altered or more clearly explained.

Lambeth (Mr. ARBUTHNOT).

Oct. 1.—QUALIFICATION OF OTHER DESCRIPTION THAN THAT CLAIMED.—Mr. Henry May claimed for a dwelling-house at No. 66, Paradise-walk, Lambeth. Upon being questioned it appeared that the claimant occupied rooms at the above address, and that other persons occupied other rooms in the house, the landlord, who resided next door, paying the rates.

The REVISING BARRISTER doubted whether he could allow the claim, as it was impossible, unless a claim was rightly made, to institute proper inquiries into the case.

Mr. Dixon (Conservative agent) submitted that under the 12th sub-section of the 28th section of the Act of last year the revising barrister had power to alter the description so as to allow the claim. He thought it would be very hard that the claim should be disallowed, as last year the applicant claimed as a lodger, but the fact of the landlord residing away from the premises made his claim wrong. This year he had claimed for a dwelling-house, which he submitted was a proper description under the new Act.

The REVISING BARRISTER ultimately decided that he would allow all such claims, and amend them so as to make them all "dwelling-houses."

Hackney (Mr. A. BATHURST).

Oct. 1.—LODGERS.—The question of what constituted a lodger was raised, Mr. Hilton remarking that it seemed that practically there were no lodgers now.

The REVISING BARRISTER: My view is this: If a man occupies a room in a house, he is a householder; it is only when a person is living in furnished rooms that he can be regarded as a lodger.

Mr. Mansfield: Then supposing this hall were cut up into rooms, and each let to a separate person, each would be regarded and would rank as a householder, and not as a lodger?

The REVISING BARRISTER: That is so.

Lord Justice Brett will be the judge on the North and South Wales Circuit, whereto the winter assizes will be held at Chester and Swansea.

Mr. Irving Browne, the author of the valuable and interesting work entitled "Short Studies of Great Lawyers," has undertaken the editorship of the Albany Law Journal.

The death is announced at Edgerston, near Jedburgh, of Mr. Oliver Rutherford, the oldest member on the list of the Scottish Faculty of Advocates. He was called to the bar in 1803, and died in the ninety-ninth year of his age. Until about twelve years ago he held the office of sheriff of the county of Roxburgh.

At the annual meeting of the Salford Hundred Licensing Committee, on Saturday, the chairman (Mr. Higgin, Q.C.) said it was a solemn farce that under the Licensing Act the committee should be bound to require persons to attend that court merely to state that their licenses were not opposed. He was of opinion that only such cases as were opposed should be brought before the committee.

WOLVERHAMPTON LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

At the first ordinary meeting of the autumn session of the society held in the Law Library on Thursday evening, September 29, R. W. Gillespie, Esq. in the chair, there was a large attendance of members and visitors. Mr. J. N. Cotterell, articled to George Cotterell, Esq., solicitor, Walsham, was unanimously elected an ordinary member. The following proposition was then discussed:—"That the land laws now in force in England are prejudicial to agriculture and detrimental to the interests of the nation at large." Mr. A. Whitehouse opened the debate in the affirmative, and was supported by Mr. T. M. Whitehouse, jun. Mr. R. J. Lawrence opposed in the negative, and was followed by Messrs. E. T. Cresswell, T. H. Evans, M. Hyde, and T. H. Bayley. After a long discussion the chairman ably summed up the arguments and put the proposition to the meeting, when it was decided in favour of the negative by six votes to two. A vote of thanks to the chairman, proposed by Mr. S. W. Page, and seconded by Mr. H. S. Pratt, terminated the proceedings.

Legal News.

"A Solicitor in the City" writes to the Daily News:—London solicitors with varied practices are obliged occasionally to do business in the county courts. I believe their experience would on examination be found to be like my own as to the kind of treatment they and their clerks meet with at the hands of the officials of these small tribunals. Lately it has been my lot to have to make one or two applications at the City of London Court, and I have found that I have had twice the trouble and ten times the incivility and inattention that would have occurred at any of the worst superior court offices. It is a common spectacle at the present time to see waiting a string of persons who have business at the general office, while the official behind the window takes his time and wastes that of those present. It generally takes from half to three-quarters of an hour to do the most trivial thing at this court, the precincts of which are, as most people know, the most sombre and uninviting in London. There is a great talk nowadays of granting increased jurisdiction to county courts; but the present machinery ought to turn its work out better before it has higher class work to do. A less attenuated and more efficient staff with more civil attention would invite London solicitors to practise in the county courts, and give effect to a system which is established on good principles. While I am upon the subject of legal grievances, I may refer to the delays and evils of the long vacation—that grand boon to over-worked lawyers, but many times a nuisance and an injustice to their clients. At the present time the whole system of her Majesty's High Court of Justice is practically worked by one judge, one chief clerk, one registrar, one chancery taxing master, and two common law masters, one for chambers and the other attending to taxations. These only sit at intervals and hear business which is called "urgent." No man can do more than a given amount of work, and as a corollary it follows that in a litigious land like ours these gentlemen are quite unable to cope with all the matters which are dignified with the term "urgent." There is no reason in the chambers of the Chancery and Common Law Divisions being closed nearly three months in the year, and a consequent stoppage of all ordinary business. For, after all, the work of the hardest-worked judge and his officials is no more than that of a solicitor in large practice who can and does find a month's vacation amply sufficient to recreate. In fact one of the most diligent and hard-worked junior clerks in chancery has told me he actually knew not how to dispose of his long vacation. If an application is to be made now at chambers the usual question is, "Is it vacation business?" and a needless amount of wrangling is expended in the arguments pro et con. Law reformers would do well to make inquiry into the uses and the evils of the long vacation, and I venture to predict that when once the subject is really ventilated this long interval of repose will be curtailed to meet the advancing requirements of the public. This is not a lawyer's question, but one of public interest, and it is not from a lawyer's stand-point I address you, but as one of the general public.

At the Bow-street Police Court, on the 27th ult., Edwin Puxley, aged forty-four, of 2, Egland-road, Bruce-road, Bow, and Benjamin Nash, aged twenty-five, of 5, Wentworth-road, Bow, labourers, were charged with conspiring to obtain various sums of money on the 24th and 27th ult.—Mr. Warde, solicitor, appeared to prosecute, and said a most ingenious fraud had been practised by the prisoners.—Mr. George Fairfax White, solicitor, 24, Chancery-lane, deposed that on Wednesday last the prisoner Puxley called at his office and represented himself to be a Mr. Smith, from Colchester, and captain and owner of a smack called Mary Ann. The shorthand clerk was called in, and took down a statement, in which he asserted that on a Friday in the present month, whilst cruising between Clacton-on-Sea and the Gun Fleet Sands, he saw the brig Concord, of Whitby, aground on the Sands, and also referred to the assistance which he and his crew rendered on the occasion. The prisoner also produced a letter purporting to come from Captain Head, the master of the Concord, authorizing the owners and underwriters to pay witness, as Captain Smith's solicitor, the sum of £160 for salvage. No further expenses to be made on the ship, and the money to be paid on the following Saturday at noon.

The statement was read to the prisoner, and he said that he had a bad cold, and wanted to get back to Colchester. He asked for a loan to pay his expenses, and witness gave him £2. Witness left town for a couple of days, and on returning heard that the prisoner Puxley had called at the office and asked for a further loan from the clerks, which they had declined to advance. Witness began to feel doubtful when the matter was reported to him, and telegraphed to Whitby, and also to the police at Colchester, and in consequence of the reply he received communicated with the police. When Puxley called on him again that morning (Saturday), he produced a letter purporting to come from a Captain Read, in which it was stated that he and another could not attend at witness's office until one o'clock in the day, to settle the salvage with Captain Smith. Puxley asked for a further advance, and stated that he had a Custom-house officer with him who had boarded the vessel. The prisoner Nash was then called up, and, in reply to witness, said that he had been on board the Concord for six days, and that he was entitled to 6s. a day for fees. Witness gave them 10s. each in the presence of the detective, and they were taken into custody and charged. On being searched nothing was found on Puxley, but a pocket-book was found on Nash. It contained several memoranda bearing the names of several solicitors. On his attention being drawn to it the prisoner Nash said he had been receiving 6s. a day from Puxley to assist him in the fraud.—The prisoner Puxley said it was no use denying the charge; he was guilty.—Nash was about to make a statement, but, understanding that a remand would take place, did not do so.—Mr. Flowers said that it would be necessary to make further inquiries, as many others might have been victimised, and the case was accordingly remanded for a week.

Dr. Legrand da Saulle has lately published a book called "Medico-Legal Studies on Disputed Wills," from which the British Medical Journal takes the following incident. The will of Louis Cortusio, a lawyer in Padua, who lived in the fifteenth century, is one of the most original in existence. He forbids all his relatives and friends to weep at his burial. He who will persist in weeping shall be disinherited, while he who will laugh heartily shall be his principal heir or universal legatee. He forbids to put up any black draperies in the house in which he shall die, as well as in the church where he is to be buried. Both must be decorated with flowers and green branches on the day of his funeral. There must be no ringing of bells, but gay music. All the musicians of the town shall be asked to his funeral; they are to walk with the clergy, making the air resound with their instruments, and singing Hallelujah as if it were Easter Day. The bier which contains his body is to be covered with bright and many-coloured cloth, and borne on the shoulders of twelve maidens of age to be married, who must be dressed in green and sing many songs. The executor of the will must see that all these formalities are fulfilled in their least details; if not, the testament will be declared void. The relatives of the deceased protested against the will, but it was declared valid.

An application was made to Mr. Justice Harrison, in Dublin, on Tuesday, on behalf of George Clarke, and George Clarke, jun., farmers of county Donegal, for their release from Lifford Gaol, to which they had been consigned after capture under an attachment order issued by the Vice-Chancellor on their refusal to pay rent or give information to a receiver appointed at the instance of the Church Temporalities Commissioners over the lands on which they occupied farms. The case of the applicants was that the former owner, left the country more than twenty years ago, and his agent had some years afterwards refused to receive any more rent; that no person had received the rents for upwards of twelve years past; and that the tenants had been so perplexed by numerous false claims put forward that when the receiver was appointed with authority they ignorantly distrusted him, but they were now willing to pay the rent due last November, though they were unable to pay the arrears. An order was made for their release on their submitting to pay £10 on account of rent, and to be subject to any other order the court might make.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA,

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.

Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality, with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press.

Being without sugar, spice, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of cocoas THICKENED, yet WEAKENED with starch, &c., and is REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Cup, costing less than a halfpenny.

COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer chocolate is prohibited.

In tin packets at 1s, 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers. Charities on Special Terms by the Sole Proprietors.
